Pome

By Elizabeth Spires

From flowering gnarled trees
    they come, weighing down
the branches, dropping with a soft sound onto the loamy ground. Falling and fallen. That’s a pome.

Common as an apple. Or more rare. A quince or pear.
A knife paring away soft skin
exposes tart sweet flesh.
    And deeper in, five seeds in a core
are there to make more pomes.

Look how it fits in my hand.
    What to do? What to do?
I could give it to you.
Or leave it on the table
    with a note both true and untrue:
Ceci n’est pas un poème.

I could paint it as a still life,
    a small window of light
in the top right corner (only a dab of the whitest white),
a place to peer in and watch it change and darken as pomes will do.

O I remember days....
    Climbing the branches of a tree
ripe and heavy with pomes.
Taking whatever I wanted.
    There were always enough then.
Always enough.
