Prints
By Joseph Bruchac

Seeing photos
of ancestors
a century past

is like looking at your own
fingerprints—

circles
and lines
you can’t recognize

until someone else
with a stranger’s eye
looks close and says
that’s you.

Source: Sing: Poetry from the Indigenous Americas (University of Arizona Press, 2011)